THE HEALTH BILL.

An attempt was made to defeat the Health bill in the Assembly this merning by taking a snap algment against it in the absence-oither intentional r accidental-of a large number of Union member It will be remembered that the bill failed yesterday for want of the constitutional majority. The friends of the bill had, however, sufficient strength to lay a m tion for reconsideration on the table. To-day the third xeading of the bills being in order, Mr. Weed (Demo crat) moved to take the bill from the table.

The motion to adjourn prevailed. Yeas, 53; Nays, 32 Thus, in an Assembly which contains a nomina Union majority of twenty-six, by one you sione, and at given by a member who originally voted to ad fourn, and was afterward persuaded to change, was this important measure saved from defeat-for its defeat ald have been certain had not the House adjourned just at the moment that it did.

On the announcement of the vote and the adjourment which followed, a scene of excitement ensued which beggars all description. The Democrats and the allies whom they had remuited from our ranks gav way to the most frantic expressions of rage and disap continent, while the Union men elated by their narro ane from defeat, burst forth into irrepressible cheer Outsiders rushed in, supposing that Johnston had sur been taken. Members of a ties buddled together in a confused and nolsy mass an the middle of the floor, and the Hon, J. L. Smith "reasons"-I beg pardon-of greenbacks, offered to $1,000 that the Speaker had decided erroneously when he entertained the motion to adjourn. The members on the Union side, who adhered to their party, no being abundantly supplied with funds, the bet was I taken. The excitement gradually cooled down, and the ALBANY, Friday, April 14, 1865.

ALRANY, Friday, April 14, 1865.

The Senate in executive session, to-day, relected the Governor's nominees for Metropolitan Fire Commissioners, by 14 to 15.

Mr. Lambeer said he reported the four Fire Commissioners sent up by the Governor because he desired to have no delay in this organization. The Commission was not what he expected or most desired, nevertheless he could not take the responsibility of delay, and must vote to confirm the nominations. It was a very important point that this should be a success, and he hoped it would be so in every particular. He thought the gentlemen named would make good Commissioners.

Mr. Andraws said he felt at his duty to put his vote on record against the confirmation of the Fire Committee, not out of any disrespect to the Governor, with whom his relations were and had been of them most friendly character, nor did he object to the gentlemen nominated personally; indeed one of them was a friend of many years' standing. He desired forther to say that he had no other personal end to serve, in as much as he had declined to make any recommendations for appointment part in advocating the passage of the fire bill, and it was equally well known that the bill had been asked for and supported by many of the best citizens of New York without reference to party. In the Assembly it was not sustained by several Democratic votes. It was never contemplated, so far as he knew, to make the paid department a party machine. It was inaugurated as a measure of municipal reform, and it would certainly operate to discourage the efforts making to accomplish such reforms. If the gentlemen who had continued so freely of their time and means to initiate reformatory measures, should find that things were simply to be turned over from one set of politicians to another. He did not claim that he had any assurance that the new partizion policy should be adopted in naming the commissioners, but it was apparent upon the face of the bill that such was its intent. The number of commissioners provided for in and on the bill that such was in time to the bill was and unusual number—four. Had the design bure a party predominate in the board three or Lave been designated as the number. Certain could have been no intent to limit the representations.
